Longer synopsis

Dolly's life spanned the history of the 20th century, from farm life to the walk on the moon. The second child in a family of ten children, the death of her mother and father launched her from a tiny farming village in northern New Brunswick, Canada, to the streets of Boston. She trained to be a nurse, was involved in World War I, the Spanish Flu Epidemic, the financial Crash of 1929, the changing world of women, and World War II, all while trying to honor her commitment to her dying mother to "please keep my children together."

A gripping story of courage, hard work and love of family.
